

GRAF NEARS THE AZORES ON TRIP TO ITS HOMELAND

Making Speed of 70 Knots Per Hour; Boosted By Brisk Wind

TO STOP IN SPAIN

Eckener Swings Ship Southward for Distance, Avoiding Low Pressure Area

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, June 4—(INS)—The Graf Zeppelin reported her position by radio at 5 a. m. today (midnight E. D. T.) "Latitude 38 north; longitude 29.30 west. Heading Azores, speed 70 knots (about 80 statute miles)."

This position placed the Graf, boosting along with a brisk wind on her tail, somewhat less than 600 miles from the Azores.

At her present speed the New York-Seville bound craft would make a landfall of the islands before 7 a. m., e. d. t.

In a radio message last night, the homeward bound air liner's veteran commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, said that he swung the ship suddenly southward for about 60 miles at 9 p. m., e. d. t., to avoid the center of a low pressure area that was working across his path from the northward. His position, at that time, was 35 north latitude 43 west longitude.

The airship was passing through heavy rain and squalls. The driving westerly and northwesterly winds, however, were directly astern or on her port quarter and she was eating up the miles.

Dr. Eckener said he expected to reach the Azores between 7 and 8
a. m., e. d. t.

Dr. Eckener wished and planned to arrive at Seville, Spain, sometime tomorrow. He gave himself a minimum of 50 hours. This would bring him in shortly after 4 a. m., Seville time, 1.12 a. m., e. d. t.

The western trade winds upon which the Zeppelin commander has always relied on his west-to-east passage over the Atlantic kept his speed average high.

50,000 Boy Scouts Are Seen In World Scout Jamboree

Monday afternoon in St. James's parish house 50,000 Boy Scouts and leaders were "seen" participating in the great game of Scouting. But the 50,000 participants were involved in a moving picture and were enjoyed by many boys from Bristol and Croydon.

This four reel motion picture was put on through the courtesy of the Boy Scouts of America and Howard E.
Thompson, a cameraman, from Trenton. It contained the activities of 1,200 Scouts from America and thousands of other Scouts from 72 different countries in the world, all meeting together in the quest of world friendliness at Arrowe Park, Birkenhead, England, last summer.

All the boys were invited to see this great picture of the World Scout Jamboree, and promptly at 4.30 p. m. the picture began. The first reel contained pictures of the Scouts of America embarking on liners and of the activities they carried out enroute to England.

The second reel showed how the 73 countries represented made camp next door to one another and of the various uniforms representing Scouting in the different countries.

The third reel contained the activities of the National Flagship of 1929 of the Sea Scouts, which group of boys and leaders were selected as a unit from the country as being outstanding among the other Sea Scout units.

The fourth reel brought forth the Prince of Wales inspecting the different scouting countries at Arrowe Park and the parade of this vast multitude before a reviewing stand. The pictures were concluded and the boys dismissed from the hall at 5.45.

NEWPORTVILLE

The Rev. Mr. White will preach at services at the Newportville Church Sunday evening, June 8th.

A family reunion was held at the

and Mrs. Henry Mellor.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fox entertained Mr. and Mrs. H. Polst, Miss Anna Polst, Miss Catharine Gilkinson and Joseph Polst, of Philadelphia, and Frank Heath, of Newtown, over the holidays.

Communication

Editor, Courier:

Sir:

During the summers of 1927-1928, the American Legion sponsored three playgrounds for the children of Bristol. When the summer of 1929 approached, this movement was unfortunately abandoned, owing to lack of funds.

The average attendance for the season of 1928 at Harriman playgrounds, of which it was my privilege to be supervisor, was 184 children daily.
This was an increase over the preceding season.

It is impossible for me to describe the disappointment of the children last summer when they found no playgrounds had been provided for them.
At Harriman, a number of children stood at the gates day after day, for one full week, hoping they would be opened and apparatus provided for their amusement. Mothers also were disappointed that their children had no safe place to play.

Let us hope there will be a generous response to the appeal of the president of the Travel Club for funds to "carry on" at least two playgrounds this summer for the children of Bristol.

We have had Boys' Week and Girls' Week. Let us keep up our interest in the future citizens of Bristol.

MARY A. WILKINSON.

HOTEL HARRISBURGER IS NEARING COMPLETION

Twenty-Two Story Building Being Rushed To Completion

OTHER STATE NEWS

HARRISBURG, June 4—(INS)— The 22 story Hotel Harrisburger is fast nearing completion, with the plumbers shoving the bricklayers through the roof, five weeks ahead of schedule. The building, being built at a cost of $1,250,000 is expected to be ready for use by August 1.

The hotel is one of the largest projects undertaken here since the state administration building was built by the commonwealth. The contractors are rushing the work to completion and are so far ahead of schedule that part of the men work only half-time in order to give those ahead of them time to finish the floor above.

The American Legion is reported to have been assured that the hotel will be ready for their state convention, which meets here in August at the same time that the Memorial Bridge is scheduled for dedication.

TYRONE, June 4—(INS)—A porcelain white-enamelled sign 56 feet long and four feet high, electrically illuminated, with "Tryone" spelled out at the top and "Penn Central Light & Power" at the bottom, is to be erected in front of Brush mountain in the near future.

The sign will be visible from the Pennsylvania railroad lines and from several highways, including the Lakes-to-Sea route.

HONESDALE, June 4—(INS)— Fruit Growers who have experienced trouble with "red bugs," already making their appearance, can combat the destructive insects by using one pint of nicotine in 100 gallons of spray, according to county agent McKeehen.

Control of the insects, which they have not been very active, can be achieved by including nicotine in the spray ten days after the petals fall.

TITUSVILLE, June 4—(INS)— Trees along McKinney highway, planted in memory of Oil City and Titusville soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, were decorated with poppies by legionnaires of the two cities on Poppy Day.

Each of the trees bears a sign at its base telling the name of the soldier whose memory is honored.

CLEARFIELD, June 4—(INS)—Fate-cheated Steve Rusnak, 33, of Sandy Rock, near here, of life, a few minutes before he was about to be released from a fall of slate a few feet from the opening of the Laurel Coal Company mine, Sandy Rock.

Steve, one of eight brothers owning and operating the mine, was caught in a fall of slate but was not discovered until his brother Joseph left the mine.
Summoning the other six Rusnaks, the brothers worked frantically and soon had the slate cleared away enough to allow Steve to direct rescue operations.

Almost the instant the men had cleared the slate from their brother's face, a rumbling, crackling warning came from above them. Ten tons of coal plunged onto the men, completely burying Steve and covering Joe up to his waist.

Joe soon was freed and the digging, more than frantic now, was resumed.
But the second fall of slate had shut off the air from Steve and when the brothers reached him he had smothered to death.

BISHOP CANNON, BEFORE SENATE LOBBY COMMITTEE FOR SECOND TIME, HAS ALTERNATIVE OF BECOMING LIABLE FOR CONTEMPT OR ANSWERING QUESTIONS

After Two Hours of Intensive Grilling He Refuses to Offer Much in Answer to Inquiries — Charges Examination as Personal Attack

WASHINGTON, June 4—(INS)— Facing the Senate Lobby Committee a second time, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., today was met with the alternative of becoming liable for contempt of the Senate or answering questions regarding his work in the 1928 presidential election.

The Bishop, after two hours of intensive grilling, has thus far refused to offer more than prepared statements to inquiries along this line.

Committee members, however, were not disposed to regard his initial answers and objections as final refusal to reply to questions. Today they planned questions designed to bring the issue to a settlement.

Should Cannon flatly refuse to reply, he would face the same situation which sent Harry F. Sinclair, multimillionaire oil magnate, to jail for contempt of the Senate.

The cleric's protests to the committee's line of questioning were on the grounds that the inquisitorial body was overstepping its authority in asking about his political work. He charged, too, the examination was a "personal" attack.

His refusal to reply except by reading the same statement he made at the conference of Methodist bishops in Dallas, recently, where he was exonerated of charges of unbecoming activities, came when Senator Walsh (D) of Montana, asked "were you active in the Asheville Conference in 1928?"

The Montana Senator referred to the meeting called to organize the South against the Democratic presidential candidacy of former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York.

Cannon was allowed to read the statement, after a grilling by Senator Blaine (R) of Wisconsin, a wet, and declared he opposed Smith in 1928 "personally, and with 40 years of active anti-liquor service behind me."

This did not satisfy the committee, however.

"Well, if you do not care to answer the question, you must assume the responsibility and take the consequences," Walsh snapped. "The committee will take the matter under advisement."

"I don't see anything in your resolution that empowers you to inquire into the anti-Smith activities in 1928," Cannon said. "This attempt on the part of this committee to go beyond its powers and to investigate my anti-Smith activities is clearly not only political, but personal, and because I believe it to be an effort to attack me, and in some way to impair my influence, as the wet and Catholic press have been doing for the past two years, I must decline to admit the jurisdiction of this committee over my personal or political activities."

SULLIVAN PITCHES HIS TEAM TO CLOSE VICTORY

Takes Up Mound Duty After Mangan is Battered in Third

FINAL SCORE IS 5 TO 4

Schedule For Tonight

A. O. H. vs. INDEPENDENTS

Last Night's Result

A. O. H. 5; FEDERALS, 4

By T. M. Jono

"Eddie" Sullivan's pinch pitching stood in the spotlight here last night as the A. O. H. nine scored two runs in the last inning to beat the Federals, 5-4.

Taking the mound duty after Mangan had been battered in the third inning, Sullivan allowed but one single, Dietrich's single in the fourth.
He retired the last six batters in rotation. To Sullivan the credit of the victory is given.

In winning the game the "Hiboes" displayed the best fielding form shown by any team this season. Out of thirty-one chances, only one play was fouled. Thompson made the error in the fourth frame.

Five times during the fray the Federals had men in scoring positions but on the following plays the Hibernalans' infield would tighten up and get the man closest to the scoring pentagon.

"Hokey" Leighton who relieved Brooks in the third-inning is charged with the defeat, although the winning run was scored when DeRisi took the mound knock.

The Hibernalans opened the game by scoring a duel of runs in the first on Connors' single, Dietrich's error of Dougherty's roller, and McGinley's timely single after the runners had reached second and third.

The Federals countered with four in the third. Brooks singled to right; McDevitt beat out a bunt to first; Cochrane was safe on a fielders' choice; Dugan singled scoring two runs; Dietrich reached first on a fielders' choice when Cochrane was upped at the plate, Dougherty to Brady; Di-Risi struck out; Purcell and Wilkinson singled, accounting for two more runs; Leighton was passed and Sullivan relieved Mangan; Brooks lifted a fly to Dougherty.

A walk to Leyden, a sacrifice, and a single by Thompson scored another Hibernalan run in the third.

The "Hibs" won the game in their last turn with the stick. Thompson struck out; McCafferty was safe on Cochrane's error; Sullivan and Brady waited for passes and got them. Connors singled to left, scoring McCaf-ferty, but Sullivan was out when he also tried to score; Dougherty received a pass; Leyden hit to Wilkinson, who fumbled, scoring Brady with the winning run.

Tonight the postponed game of May 28 will be played.

The senior class members are now in the midst of their final examinations, and it is expected these will be concluded within a few days.

The pupils in the eight grades of the several schools of the borough will commence their final examinations on Monday, June 9th, and these will continue throughout that week.

Half sessions are to take place in all of the public school buildings, here, on the 13th, 19th and 20th of June.

Mr. Hanford will receive gold medal awarded by the Alumni Association to the student graduating who attains the highest scholastic average. He will receive the B. Sc. degree.

The Delaware river below Trenton, is classed as "polluted and unfit for bathing," in a warning issued by Dr.
Willem Rudolfs, head of the Department of Water Supplies and Sewage Disposal of the New Jersey State Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dr. Rudolfs warns parents to restrict the bathing of their children to properly supervised swimming pools.
He points out that the Raritan, the Newark and the Passaic rivers and the South and Millstone rivers are also unfit for bathing.

"Analyses of water taken from streams in many sections of the State proved that pollution of New Jersey's rivers has progressed to a deplorable extent," Dr. Rudolfs said.

"We have found pollution so bad in a number of rivers that persons bathing in them run the risk of painful infections of the eyes, nose, ears and skin. The layman rarely associates such infections with bathing because several days and sometimes weeks elapse before the infection becomes apparent."

"If typhoid carriers are present in communities which dump raw sewage into rivers, bathing in such streams holds the danger of contracting typhoid fever."
"The cause for such widespread pollution is found in the fact that all or part of the wastes from many communities finds its way to rivers and streams. Along the Raritan, for example, all of the towns, with one exception, pour their raw sewage into the river."

NATIVE OF BRISTOL DIES AT INDIANAPOLIS

B. D. Brooks, Retired Business Man, Succumbs After Active Career

BORN HERE IN 1856

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 4.— Closing a life that paralleled closely the growth of the city of Indianapolis, Bartholomew D. Brooks, aged 74, retired business man and widely-known developer of West Indianapolis real estate, died at his home, 1239 Blaine avenue, Sunday at noon.

Coming to Indianapolis sixty-one years ago, Mr. Brooks started work with a company laying the first wood block street built in the city, and attained an outstanding position in Indianapolis business and commercial life.

Born in Bristol, Pa., January 2, 1856, Mr. Brooks came to Indianapolis to attend school, but soon went to work for the street construction concern and started studying the playing mill business. He became an authority in this line of work and with others established the West Side Planing Mill Company, predecessor of the Capitol Lumber Company. Later he went into business for himself and established the B. D. Brooks Lumber Company, which prospered for many years.

He was formerly secretary of the United Ice Company, a West Indianapolis business concern. He was secretary of the Home Insurance Company for some time.

With a group of other persons he organized the Marion County State Bank and was chosen as the first president of the institution. He was also one of the founders of the American Mutual Insurance Company.

A member of the Roberts Park M.
E. Church for many years, he was known as a liberal supporter of churches and benevolent enterprises.
He was a McGuffeyite and president of the Indianapolis Theatre Guild. For many years he took an active part in Democratic party politics, having been a candidate for office on that ticket at one time.

No close relatives survive. Mrs.
Brooks, formerly Miss Mollie Spiegel, died February 15, 1919.

DEFECTIVE AUTOS

An analysis made by the National Conference on Highway Safety places at 10 per cent the proportion of the 33,000 traffic fatalities in 1929 that were caused by defects in motor vehicles. Some state highway officials estimate it even higher. But at 15 per cent it vindicates the spreading practice of compulsory periodic inspections of motor vehicles.

These defects are largely attributable to improper maintenance by the automobile owner and to the use of superannuated vehicles which have frequently changed hands through resales. To the automobile owners the moral of the foregoing is plain—keep the car in good order, with especial attention to the brakes and steering mechanism, or keep it off the highway.

The conference points out as a warning to drivers that an increase from 20 to 30 miles an hour in the speed of city driving represents an increase of 50 per cent in speed, but an increase of 125 per cent in the energy and destructive power of the moving vehicle, because the energy is proportionate to the square of the speed. Partly offsetting this added threat are the recent radical improvements in the strength and efficiency of brakes, in the construction of tires and in the balance and ease of handling of motor cars.

It is incontrovertible that the modern motor car can be driven with greater safety at higher speeds in city traffic than models of four or five years ago, but it behooves every driver to bear in mind the destructive force of speed.

DAYS OF FRIED CHICKEN

Many people living in every community remembers the good old days when fried chicken always marked the advent of the circuit rider. These were the days when Methodist conferences in smaller cities vacated the coops. The good old days when fried chicken greeted all the company, and children wondered whether they would get the drumstick or the neck.

These were the days when friers sold from $1.25 to $2 per dozen, and the cook got a dollar a week and ration—these days when the old man worked for $40 a month, and his promising son clerked in a store "just to learn a business," and never saw a pay envelope.

Old timers rejoice to recall the days of fried chicken and pumpkin pies—of the spring wagon and the old gray mare—of the church strawberry festival and kerosene lamps—of the Wednesday night prayer meeting and the small wood stove.

But not a mother's son of 'em would have these "good old days" back. But it does make a fellow lonesome to talk about the fried chicken, which "Aunt Malinda" used to cook.

Three-fourths of all motor vehicles are sold on credit. Rulers pay as they go.

Don't kill your bore acquaintances. Lend them five each and you won't see them any more.

Prohibition has resolved itself into a matter of drinking and arguing. As Will Rogers puts it: "The more we argue the more we drink, and the more we drink the more we argue."

INSTALLMENT ONE
Reluctantly Dawn passed through the convent gate and proceeded up the abrupt rocky pathway to the canteen. Inside the convent walls she had been quietly content; here in the clearing in the wilderness she felt as if each ray of heat from the African sun plunged a dart of uneasiness into her.

Tomorrow she would be the bride of the god Malungu; she would be the worshipped Thabu of the blacks who dwelled in the jungles surrounding the little settlement in the British East African Protectorate. She would be a goddess. To her would her people address their entreaties to be spared all famine, all pain, all torment. Malungu—the god Malungu—had chosen her. She recalled the words of the native chant:

"He has seen the white body and the blue of her eyes.

The sun in her hair and the red-tipped lips."

She thought of Tom Allen and sighed. Tom was a prisoner of war increasing numbers in the clearing before the canteen. They knelt or squatted in the grass, their naked backs glistening in the sun. Their hushed words came to her faintly, and she realized, with sudden dismay, that they were gathering to receive the message from Malungu, to be told that she was to be their Thabu.

She glanced quickly at the veranda, but was rewarded with no sight of Mooda. The usual cluster of patrons were scattered about the veranda, some of them drinking, others merely awaiting the passing of the day's heat. Native soldiers in tattered uniforms of German army listlessly stood guard over the prisoners of war whose loneliness and thirst Captain Eric generously appreciated. Native girls moved among the patrons.

Presently there came to Dawn's ear the plaintive strains of a song she instantly recognized through the overtone of clinking glasses. It was, she told herself in brief flash, TO SAVE A THOUGHT FOR THE

Tomorrow she would be consecrated to a black god now, driven from his plantation when the Germans made the settlement theirs earlier in this chaotic year of 1914. She thought of Tom and grew sad. Why, she wondered unhappily, did he always treat her with such expansive tenderness—as one would treat a prized dog. And would he be saddened, she wondered further, when he learned that she had been sacrificed to the native god? Oh, well, was her rueful conclusion, Tom white and— "He has seen her white body and the blue of her eyes."

Dawn toyed with a suspicion that often assailed her. The white traders and planters had often remarked the extraordinary blue of her eyes. The eyes of the native girls, even the half-castes and the East Indians who came up from Mombasa—they were brown—always brown. As a little girl Dawn had often besought of Mooda an explanation of this phenomenon.

"Your father was English," was Mooda's ready answer. Her responses to questions concerning the present whereabouts of the girl's absent father were vague and ill-tempered. Dawn was continually reminded that she was destined to be a goddess and that she must not allow her mind to be disturbed by doubts and speculations. But when she thought of Tom Allen she was invariably guilty of an unexpressed wish to be white.

Young Tom Allen had come out of England to take charge of his enormous rubber plantation which lay near the settlement. Dawn became immediately attracted to him when she beheld him for the first time seated with the others on the veranda of Mooda's canteen. A smiling, handsome young man, Tom was also, by reason of his expert knowledge of rubber something of an untitled leader of the white settlers. Spanish, Portuguese, French, Italian, British—all liked him and respected him.

And when Captain Eric, the severely courteous commandant of the German forces, whose flag now floated fully over the settlement, forced out the British, he placed Tom in charge of the prisoners though forced by exigencies of war to hold him prisoner as well. Before the declaration of war they had been friends and neighbors; this friendship persisted between captor and captive.

Occupied with her melancholy reflections, Dawn failed to notice that the natives were assembling in lathe song that heralded the approach of Hasumali, messenger of Malungu. It meant that the ceremony was to take place very soon. Mooda knew would be looking for her, doubtless angry with her for loitering on her return from the convent.

She threw a hopeful, yet despairing glance toward the jungle for a final sight of Tom. The pipe music rose insistently, shrilly. Dawn stepped from the rock and ran toward the canteen. She avoided the veranda and darted to the far side of the structure and up a rickety flight of bamboo stairs. She paused at the door and stepped forward expectantly to hear what was being said on the veranda. But the only sound that came to her was the notes of the flute, melancholy, unheeded, terrifying. She stumbled in to the mean hut, her heart filled with despair.

Downstairs Mooda, assured by the sounds above that Dawn had returned, stepped out upon the veranda to hasten the ceremonies. Mooda was a striking creature. Her features were unmistakably Caucasian, but her African blood was evident in her color. She possessed a natural dignity which gave way to unbridled rage when rage suited her. She surveyed the group seated here, white and black alike, with undisguised arrogance. She immediately cloaked it with benignity, however, as the natives, with awe and humility, stepped forth one by one to lay a gift for the new goddess on the table.

On the side of the veranda three prisoners of war paused in their drinking, amazed at the unusual proceedings. Pigeon, a Cockney whose spontaneous dislike for Africa had mounted with his imprisonment, addressed himself to his companions, Anzac and Napoli.

"What's all the row about?" he asked.

Anzac, a monstrous Australian, flexed his huge shoulders to disavow any knowledge whatever of the natives' maneuvers. This shrug was so typical of Anzac's response to any direct question that it sprang into eloquent action automatically. Napoli, a swart Italian, was too comfortable to speculate on the meaning of the spectacle. He settled himself more deep in his chair and assured himself that the native boy, seated on the stairs, was properly manning the string that moved the fan above him.

TRAGEDY STALKED PAIR NOW BIG IN SPORT WORLD

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, June 4.—Tragedy started down into the souls of two men and, undaunted by what it saw there, averted its gaze, defeated. That was several years ago. Today, this di-hard pair is the toast of the sport world, feted and honored everywhere because success is their hallmark and failure their acknowledged victim. I am talking about Glenn Wright, the great shortstop, and Earl Sande, the great race rider.

Neither was great a couple of years ago. They had known fame in their time but this apparently had passed them by and gone on to others, presumably bringing two great careers to a premature end. Yet it is a matter of record that, within a period of eight days early in May, Sande had ridden Gallant Fox to victory in the Derby and Preakness, while Wright's hitting and defense was the inspiration on which the Brooklyn club swept through its field and into the fight for the National League's leadership.

Wright has made that ball club what it is today, where a year ago he wasn't good enough to sit on its bench on the off chance that he might be useful in a pinch. He had a "dead" arm and it is an axiom of the ball field that the dead never come to life.

Where was Sande a year ago? After sustaining a series of major shocks that included his critical injuries at Saratoga, his suspension from the turf and the death of his wife, he was in the paddock trying to train horses. Some of them were his own and it cost him $70,000 to find out that racing is a rich man's game. It was thought at the time that he had grown too heavy to ride again.

There is a well-defined parallel to be seen in the histories of these gallant men. Sande, jammed into the rail at Saratoga and carried away in sections, sitting stoically in his room with his shattered anatomy suspended on wires so that it might knit again into human guise. Wright, his shoulder operation concluded, also sitting motionless with his arm in a cast for weeks while the old tissues were made into new by nature's remedies. Sande, barred from the turf for rough riding, fighting his way back into official favor again. Wright, grimly trying to live down the lack of sympathy between the Pittsburgh owners and himself. Sande, the unsuccessful trainer of 1929. Wright, the ball player who couldn't play ball. Sande, heartened by the encouragement of his wife, Wright playing "catch" with his wife in the backyard in an effort to re-awaken the old snap in his throwing arm.

They have lived through a lot, this pair, during recent years. So much, in fact, that few gave them a chance when they tried again in the Spring. Wright had to make the entire circuit of the National League before ball players would credit the miracle of his recovery. Sande, they said, wouldn't have the old fire after his year out of the saddle. He never has ridden two better races than he did in the Preakness and Derby, just as Wright never has played better ball than he is playing at this moment.

There is only one conclusion, one moral, to take from this story. Fate apparently is powerless where the soul of man is iron.

Federals Announce They Have Released Three Men

The Federals announce the release of Horace Jeffries, Jack Nichols and Albert Cooper, and the signing of Michael DeRisi, William Laferty and Charles Leighton.

Independents have released Chester Beaton and signed Harvey Cochrane.

On Wednesday June 4, A. O. H. will play the Independents. This is the game postponed on May 28th.

TOOK ELEVEN INNINGS TO DEFEAT EMILIE

EMILIE, June 4.—It took the South-western team of Philadelphia eleven innings to gain the first victory of the season against the home club here Sunday. Final score was 8-5.

At the regulation number of innings the score was five all. The visitors or home team could not push over a run in the tenth but in the eleventh, the Southwestern nine bunched their hits to score three times and hand the first defeat of the season to the Emilie team in six starts.

Black and Joseph hurled good ball and kept the hits well scattered. Black whiffed nine batters and gave up thirteen hits while Joseph fanned five batters and allowed twelve hits.

Schoenfeld, of the resident team, had a good day with the stick connecting for four hits in four trips to the plate. He also stole two bases and played errorless ball in the field.

Burns played wonderful ball for the visitors while Kauffman led their hitting with three hits in five times up.

Bible in N. Y. City Schools Is Upheld by Authorities

Corporation Counsel Fights Free-Thinker's Suit—Clarence Darrow Will Lead Battle for Abolishment.

JAMES J. WALKER, CLARENCE DARROW, MAJ. JOS. WHELESS. Reading the Bible in the public schools of New York City is not only permissible under the City Charter but does not violate any provision of the New York State Constitution or that of the United States, was the answer of Corporation Counsel Arthur J. W. Hilly to the taxpayer's suit brought by Joseph Lewis, president of the Free Thinkers' Society of New York, to restrain the Board of Education from allowing the Bible to be taught in the public schools. Argument on the motion will be held in New York City June 9, when it is claimed that Clarence Darrow will argue the case for the Free Thinkers. Arthur Garfield Hays, attorney for the society, and Major Joseph Wheless, former judge-advocate of the U. S. Army, with Mr. Darrow, will be arrayed against Counsel Hilly and the Walker administration.

from quoting Holy Writ to the 1,200, 000 children attending public school classes in this city. The combined forces of all religious denominations will back Corporation Counsel Arthur J. W. Hilly, representing Mayor Walker. A few weeks ago the Free Thinkers' Society of New York filed a taxpayer's claim to restrain the Department of Education from permitting Biblical quotations to be made to public school students.

The city authorities paid little attention to the move until they learned that the suit was backed by a powerful agnostic group which plans to carry their anti-Bible fight, if successful here, into other great cities.

Lawyers representing the principal religious faiths will be in court to assist Corporation Counsel Hilly in defending the rights of teachers to read the Bible in class.

On the Free Thinkers' side supporting Darrow will be such great legal stars as Arthur Garfield Hays, a leading New York lawyer, and Major Joseph Wheless, former Judge-Advocate of the U. S. Army.

When questioned about the impending case, Joseph Lewis, president of the Free Thinkers' Society, said: "One of the reasons we don't want the Bible read in the public schools is because we consider it a violation of one of the most fundamental American principles—separation of church and State."

"We believe that higher ideals can be inculcated into the minds of our school children by teaching them the life and characters and lives of our revolutionary fighters like Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington, not to leave out Abraham Lincoln, who was a free thinker."

"The things that the Bible contains are, from an educational point of view, in direct variance and conflict with the things taught children in the schools. The history of the Bible has been proven to be false."

In opposing the suit Corporation Counsel Hilly will point out that the Bible has been taught in our schools for seventy-six years and the daily readings have an educational, as well as historic, value.

The New York law permits the daily reading of the Bible, but does not make it obligatory. It does prohibit, however, any comment on any of the quotations.

For years the Free Thinkers' Society has sought, without success, to introduce bills into the State Legislature forbidding Bible reading in schools. With such men as Darrow and Hays taking up the battle, the city fathers and religious leaders are preparing for a hard legal fight.

Both these great lawyers participated in the famous Scopes Evolution trial in Dayton, Tenn., several years ago.
